

Guest Speaker : 20 March

Dr Lindsay Digglemann

Dr Lindsay Digglemann is a senior lecturer in History at the University of Auckland. He teaches a wide range of topics concerning European history, especially the Middle Ages and the Italian Renaissance. His specialist area is the Anglo-Norman period of the 11th and 12th centuries, including a focus on objects of enduring interest such as the Bayeux Tapestry and Domesday Book.

Before returning to University as a 'mature student' and embarking on an academic career, Lindsay spent 12 years working in the financial markets as a foreign exchange dealer and investment manager.

In March, Dr Digglemann will be talking to us about the Crusades with which we can see some parallels in the world today.

He has spoken to many U3A groups who have hailed him as one of their best speakers.
